

SIX DRIFT TO DOOM

While Balky Engine in Naptha Launch Refuses to Turn Propeller.

OUTING HAS TRAGIC ENDING

Prominent Residents of Warren, Pa., on River for an Outing Are Victims of Treacherous Machine, Swept Over Dam and Drowned.

Warren, Pa., July 13.—Six lives were lost last evening at Rutherford near here, by the capsizing of a naptha launch. The dead are: John Best, age 45, owner of large foundry, a man of considerable wealth and very prominent locally. Mrs. John Best, his wife, age 25. Violet Best, his daughter, age 18. Mrs. George Baker, age 30, forewoman in Smith's department store. Mrs. Hilda Knox, age 32, forewoman in Smith's department store.

O. F. Butz, traveling salesman for Strawbridge & Clothier of Philadelphia.

The party was from the Smith department store and were out for a picnic. They had gone to Edgewater, a summer resort on Conwago creek, and there divided into parties, each party going out in naptha launch.

One of the boats became fast on a sunken log above a dam and the boat that capsized went to its assistance. The small naptha engine in it refused to start. In this helpless condition the boat was carried over the dam and turned turtle. There were nine persons in the boat, but three were saved.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE.

New York, July 13.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says today:

"There is not the customary complaint of midsummer dullness in general trade channels, while the demand for seasonable fabrics is rapidly depleting stocks that threatened to be carried over. brisk retail trade is accompanied by more prompt collections, and many cities that were slow to respond to the better feeling now send satisfactory reports. Jobbers and wholesalers are receiving liberal orders for fall and winter merchandise, and interior buyers are active in the primary markets. Manufacturing returns tell of large orders on hand and very heavy production during the first half of the year.

"Lower prices for pig iron were due to the larger output and more prompt deliveries that reduced the premium price for early shipments. Consumption has not appreciably diminished, although a few of the steel mills are closed for repairs. Despite some furnaces rendered idle for the same reason, the total number in blast increased six during June.

"Quiet conditions prevail in the primary markets for cotton goods, but the mills are fully occupied and there is no prospect of easier terms owing to the large amount of business under contract, unless extensive cancellations are received. The strength of the market is due to the statistical position, buyers being compelled to wait longer for deliveries than ever before in the history of the industry. It is also noted that requests are urgent for earlier forwarding than the date under contract, showing the light stocks in other than first bands, and there is no prospect of relief during the balance of this year at least."

MARK HAD A GOOD TIME

Declares Trip to England Has Made Him Seven Years Younger.

London, July 13.—Mark Twain spent the last day of his visit to England quietly, being free at last from the engagements which have filled almost every hour of his time since his arrival. During the morning he went over the national gallery under the guidance of the director, Sir Charles Holroyd, and after lunching with friends returned to his rooms, where he will remain until his departure for Tilbury to embark on board the Atlantic Transport line steamer Minnetonka for New York. Many persons called to bid farewell to the humorist, whose reception in England has exceeded in warmth that of any visitor in many years. Mark Twain, naturally, is greatly pleased and expresses himself as having had the best of times.

In an interview Mr. Clemens said: "I have had a violent gay and energetic life here for four weeks, but I have not felt no fatigue and I have had but little desire to quiet down. I am younger now by seven years than I was, and if I could stay here another month I could make it 14."

"This is the most enjoyable holiday I have ever had and I am sorry the end of it has come. I have met a hundred old friends and made a hundred new ones. It's a good kind of riches—there's none better, I think."

"For two years past I have been planning my funeral, but I have changed my mind now and have postponed it.

"I suppose I won't see England again, but I don't like to think of that."

Asks $10,000 for an Eye.

Akron, O., July 13.—Mrs. Catherine Wearster has filed an amended petition in her suit against the Reder Grocery company asking for $10,000 because a can of molasses placed on the market by the Reder company exploded when she was opening it, destroying the sight of one of her eyes.

AMONG THE FANS.

Notes Picked Up in the Grandstand at the Base Ball Game.

The buggy brigade remain loyal. A. A. Straub, Andrew Huns, Bateman Newcomer, Charles W. Patterson, Dr. T. B. Eichard, Dr. H. F. Atkinson, M. Ronland, Samp Roed, J. L. Stader, Wade Martella and a number of others seldom miss a game. They always line up their rigs back of first base.

It is rumored that Steve King has quit betting.

Tony Butano sees the fine points of the game from the field back of first base.

E. E. Markell and W. H. Hugus are interested spectators at nearly all of the games.

Ralph Morton roots from the top row in the grand stand. His rooting consists in long silent wishes that the other fellows will not get as many runs as we do.

Attorney E. C. Higbee is one of the best posted men on baseball in town. He is a dyed in the wool baseball lover and when work does not keep him in his office he is always to be seen in the grand stand.

Charley Stont and Bill Marqua think things up along the left field side line when things are going wrong. All smiles lately though. No thinking thinking when we win ten straight games.

Vendor if Bill Malarky wouldn't sooner be unyarned.

Some enemy recommended the writer to umpire the second game yesterday. What? And the home folks up there in the grand stand.

Charley Patterson explained the play to Ben Donnelly in a cozy corner along the left field fence.

Sam Goodman saw game the other day. A. A. Straub had him out.

Attorney W. H. Brown smokes on an average a tobac an evening when he attends a game.

Captain H. A. Crow is an inveterate rooter. When there is any chance to see games at the park he is there and a more loyal supporter the local club does not boast.

Rockwell Martella and Harry Marletta are daily attendants in the grand stand.

Frank Port misses few games. He is one of the top row gang in the grand stand.

Cashier Harry Schenck, of the Colonial National Bank, is a great baseball lover and manages to see many games after banking hours.

SOMERSET IS IN.

New Season in the West Penn Will Open on Monday of Next Week.

Somerset has been officially declared a member of the West Penn League and the games played this week in Connellsville count in Connellsville's averages as games won. The new season opens on Monday, the schedule for which is given on this page. Somerset baseball fans will support the new team, but they insist on having a team that will be up with the leaders. Manager Malarky has not been hasty in signing players until he knows just where he stands. A deal is on now that if successful will give Somerset a team that will be fighting for first place right from the start. The wires were kept hot on it all day today and by Monday or this evening there may be something doing. Next week the new Somerset team will play four days at home and two away.

By winning yesterday's games the Connellsville players have earned now uniforms or $150 in money, whichever they choose, for taking ten straight games. Tomorrow the team plays in Clarksburg and then come home to start the new season with Butler.

Four meetings of Expos were held for court on the charge. S. C. Fins and Thomas McElroy of New Alexandria were charged for lack of evidence. The defendants were held, under a Supreme Court decision for their inability to answer when asked what they did with such large quantities of beer. If they can't show conclusively that they did not sell it, they will be released. Meanwhile, fearing an invasion of foreign brewery products into this region, the Westmoreland Brewers have declared a reduction in the regular price, and now dollar beer is universal throughout.

Three Officers of Steel Foundries Company Get $80000 Besides Salaries in Year

PIBUSURG July 1.—(Special)—that certain officers of the American Steel Foundries Company are receiving 16 per cent or more of the corporation's profits in addition to their regular salaries. A number of stockholders have invested themselves in a movement to divert this money in the direction and the interest kind of a time in prospect.

The stockholders in question will be fully secured with a view to controlling the financial policy next October and compelling the Directors to restore the dividend on the preferred stock. They declare that a statement in the report that it would be to the best interests of the corporation to build up a large working capital instead of distributing profits among stockholders need no explanation. They claim the corporation has a working capital of something like $400,000. Profits for the fiscal year ending July 1, they declare, will be close to $2,000,000.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

By CHARLES KLEIN.

A Story of American Life Novelized From the Play by ARTHUR HORNBLOW.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY C. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY.

"You? You?" he stammered.
"Yes—yes, I am the Rossmore woman! Listen, Mr. Ryder. Don't turn away from me. Go to Washington on behalf of my father, and I promise you I will never see your son again—ever, never!"

"Ah, Shirley!" cried Jefferson, "you don't love me!"

"Yes, Jeff, I do. God knows I do! But if I must break my own heart to save my father I will do it."

"Would you sacrifice my happiness and your own?"

"No happiness can be built on lies, Jeff. We must build on truth or our whole house will crumble and fall. We have deceived your father, but he will forgive that, won't you?" she said, appealing to Ryder, "and you will go to Washington, you will save my father's honor, his life, you will!"

They stood face to face—this slim, delicate girl battling for her father's life, arrayed against a cold, blooded, heartless, unscrupulous man, deaf to every impulse of human sympathy or pity. Since this woman had deceived him, fooled him, he would deal with her as with every one else who crossed his will. She laid her hand on his arm, pleading with him. Brutally, savagely, he thrust her aside.

"No, no, I will not!" he thundered. "You have wormed yourself into my confidence by means of lies and deceit. You have tricked me, fooled me to the very limit! Oh, it's easy to see how you have beguiled my son into the folly of loving you! And you—you have the brazen effrontery to ask me to plead for your father? No! No! No! Let the law take its course, and now, Miss Rossmore, you will please leave my house tomorrow morning!"

Shirley stood listening to what he had to say, her face white, her mouth quivering. At last the crisis had come. It was a fight to the finish between this man, the incarnation of corporate greed, and herself, representing the fundamental principles of right and justice. She turned on him in a fury:

"Yes, I will leave your house tonight! Do you think I would remain another hour beneath the roof of a man who is as blind to justice, as deaf to mercy, as incapable of human sympathy, as you are?"

She raised her voice, and as she stood there denouncing the man of money, her eyes flashing and her head thrown back, she looked like some avenging angel defying one of the powers of evil.

"Leave the room!" shouted Ryder, beside himself, and pointing to the door.

"Father!" cried Jefferson, starting forward to protect the girl he loved.

"You have tricked him as you have me!" thundered Ryder.

"It is your own vanity that has tricked you!" cried Shirley contemptuously. "You lay traps for yourself and walk into them. You can tell every one around you to lie to you, to cajole you, to praise you, to deceive you! At least you cannot accuse me of flattering you. I have never fawned upon you as you compel your family and your friends and your dependents to do. I have always appealed to your better nature by telling you the truth, and in your heart you know that I am speaking the truth now."

"Go!" he commanded.

"Yes, let us go, Shirley!" said Jefferson.

"No, Jeff, I came here alone, and I'm going alone!"

"You are not. I shall go with you. I intend to make you my wife!"

Ryder laughed scornfully.

"No!" cried Shirley. "Do you think I'd marry a man whose father is as deep a discredit to the human race as your father is? No. I wouldn't marry the son of such a merciless traitor! He refuses to lift his voice to save my father. I refuse to marry his son!"

She turned on Ryder with all the fury of a tigress:

"You think if you lived in the old days you'd be a Caesar or an Alexander. But you wouldn't! You'd be a

"Leave the room!" shouted Ryder. "Never a word! Stink my self respect to the extent of marrying into your family!" she exclaimed contemptuously. "Never! I am going to Washington without your aid. I am going to save my father if I have to go on my knees to every United States senator. I'll go to the White House, I'll tell the president what you are! Marry your son—no, thank you! No, thank you!"

Exhausted by the vehemence of her passionate outburst, Shirley hurried from the room, leaving Ryder speechless, staring at his son.

CHAPTER XVI.
WHEN Shirley reached her room she broke down completely. She threw herself upon a sofa and burst into a fit of violent sobbing. After all, she was only a woman, and the ordeal through which she had passed would have taxed the strongest powers of endurance. She had borne up courageously while there remained the faintest chance that she might succeed in moving the financier to pity, but now that all hopes in that direction were shattered and she herself had been ordered harshly from the house, like any ordinary unfactor, the reaction set in, and she gave way freely to her long pent-up anguish and distress. Nothing now could save her father, not even this journey to Washington which she determined to take nevertheless; for, according to what Stott had said, the senate was to take a vote that very night.

She looked at the time—11 o'clock. She had told Mr. Ryder that she would leave his house at once, but on reflection it was impossible for a girl alone to find a room at that hour. It would be midnight before she could get her things packed. No, she would stay under this hated roof until morning and then take the first train to Washington. There was still a chance that the vote might be delayed, in which case she might yet succeed in winning over some of the senators. She began to gather her things together and was engaged when she heard a knock at her door.

"Who's there?" she called out.

"It's I," replied a familiar voice. Shirley went to the door and opening it found Jefferson on the threshold. He made no attempt to enter, nor did she invite him in. He looked tired and worn.

"Of course, you're not going to-night?" he asked anxiously. "My father did not mean to-night."

"No, Jeff," she said wearily; "not to-night. It's a little too late. I'll wait until morning."

"But Mr. Ryder said—"

"Please deliver my messages to Mr. Stott," Shirley said with a smile as she went to see Mr. Stott.

The maid went away, but she had hardly got to the door when it was opened again and Mrs. Ryder entered with Mr. Stott. She was still flushed with exertion, but she had a burly look. She had a heavy, top-heavy, look about her, but she had a look of strength and energy. It was as strong as ever.

"Give this to Mr. Ryder and tell him I can't see him."

The buying for these two stores is conducted by one management. The stocks are identical in both stores, with few exceptions. Our immense buying supremacy makes it possible to quote you clearance prices wholly beyond the power of competitive establishments. We buy and sell more merchandise than any other establishment between Pittsburgh and Baltimore.

Every man, woman and child from one end of this busy county to the other can easily visit this sale. West Penn cars pass right by the doors of both of our immense stores. We enjoy the reputation and owe our phenomenal growth to the facts that we never offer an inferior article of merchandise for sale, and that never in our short but wonderfully successful business career in Fayette county have we exaggerated or misrepresented a value in the slightest degree. Every item advertised on this page is an absolute bona fide value, and we'll live up to every statement here. You'll find things exactly as represented.
